

Regarding allowing use of cell phones. My answer is an emphatic no. Keep the ban in place. There is a safety issue requiring the ability to maintain instant communication with all passengers either from the flight deck or the flight attendants at a moments notice. People talking on cell phones would interfere with that ability. Today, even if a movie is playing, the flight deck and flight attendants have the ability to override the sounds and get their message across. The flight crew has no control over cell phone conversations.
